AWP book on Teaching Writing to Rural Students (MotesBooks, 2010)

Be a part of the this book that will target elementary-college level teachers of rural students. Its aim is twofold: (a) to include first-person essays by teachers of writing about how they practice what they expect of their students (including inspiration, process, writer’s block, etc.) and (b) to provide research-based ideas on teaching writing in the content areas with suggested modifications.

Guidelines: Pieces should be no longer than 5 pages or 1500 words in length (including bibliographic references). Teaching ideas should be based on the author’s own action research in his/her classroom, but should also be grounded in theory or other secondary research. Original artwork and photography with relevant connections to the book’s theme will be considered and may also be considered for the cover. This process is a blind review, meaning authors’ names will not appear on their pieces as they are being considered.

Format: Double-spaced word-processed pieces should be sent electronically as attachments and saved in RTF (Rich Text Format). Use 12 point Times New Roman font. Please use the endnotes feature to identify your sources and MLA format for the bibliographic citation. (Endnotes will appear this way\textsuperscript{1}). Original artwork and photography should be scanned in high resolution format and sent as a PDF file. On a separate page, authors should include: name, address, email, telephone, title of the piece and a 50-word bio should the piece be selected for publication. The author’s name should NOT appear on the piece itself. Only electronic submissions will be accepted. Should your piece be chosen for publication, please understand that it may be returned to you for further revision or editing before it is considered ready for the final manuscript. Upload your submission to awpsubmissions@yahoo.com.
